Gen. Grant Laid Away With Magnificent Ceremony.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

New York, Aug. 8.—At 2 o'clock this morning Undertaker Merritt brushed the glass plates above General Grant's body and drew from their places the two lids which cover the casket. The four screws in each were turned down and the face of the dead had been unless there shall in the future come from the family a request to remove the lids. Then the DEAD WAS LEFT IN THE CARE OF GUARDS, who stood erect and silent within the closed gates and beneath the black drapery. A huge floral piece, "the gates ajar," had a place at the head of the casket, and the sweet smell of lilies was borne down to those who stood and watched. Great horse shoes of red and yellow rose buds added their fragrance.

ONE TRIBUTE WITHOUT FRAGRANCE.

But there was one tribute that bore no fragrance, except such as will come tenderly to the family of the dead. It bore no perfume, save that which lives in its memories. This was a plain wreath of oak leaves, pinned together with stems of oak leaves and formed in the shape of a letter "G." The leaves grew on the oaks in the forests of Mt. McGregor, and fluttered in the mountain breezes while General Grant was dying, and on the afternoon of Thursday, the day he died, little Julia, his granddaughter, and little Josie, Dr. Douglas's child, had gathered the oak leaves in the mountain roads. Then as the children prattled, they KNIT WITH INNOCENT FINGERS and loving hearts the wreath of oak leaves that to-day is the only tribute that touches the general's casket. The little ones, their offering finished, had taken it to Colonel Grant, whose eyes filled when his daughter said: "Papa, Josie and I have made this for grandpa, and please won't you give it to him." The colonel placed the oaken wreath on the casket and there it rested at Albany and still remains as the children's offering.

Four o'clock had passed, the gray of dawn had deepened to red, daylight was near, the strains of dirge music crept on the morning air, at first distant, then they drew nearer and nearer, the red deepened in the east and sunrise was near. The strains of music, slow and sad, grew more distinct, then the blue-coated veterans of Meade Post, of Philadelphia, 500 strong, came tramping to the dirge music of the trumpets. The east was suffused with tints of orange and dawn was closer—

THE DAWN OF THE FUNERAL DAY.

The veterans entered the plaza and marched past, while muffled drums timed their footsteps. A heavy gun boomed out toward the sea. The chiming of old Trinity and the sound-muffled drums grew fainter, then died away. At 6:30 Captain A. C. Parry and his men, of the seventy-first regiment went on duty as the

PEALING MOURNFUL NOTES

before the removal. At 7 o'clock strains of solemn music floated in at the grated iron doors from many directions. At 8 o'clock nature was putting forth signals of an intensely hot day. The crowds grew denser and denser around the plaza, the muffled drums and dirgeful trumpets marched in at one side and took positions at the east end. At 8:50

GEN HANCOCK AND STAFF

trooped slowly into the plaza from Broadway and presented front to the city hall, then moving to the end of the plaza on Broadway, where they stood in the plaza. At this time 100 members of the Liederkreis society filed up to the steps of city hall, and led by four instruments, sang with impressive effect, "The chorus of spirits from over the water," and "The chorus of the pilgrims," from Tautausser.

The honor guard of regulars filed into the open space at 9 o'clock. First company A, fifth artillery, under Col. W. B. Beck, and company E, twelfth infantry, under Major Brown, then came then came the original guard of honor that was on duty at Mt. McGregor, and which alone should lift the remains to-day. Filing into the corridors of City hall, they took places beside the remains, under command of John H. Johnson, senior vice-commander of Grant post of G. A. R., of Brooklyn, New York.

THE FUNERAL CAR.

"LIFT THE REMAINS."

was the next command in clear but low tones. The twelve men stooped to the silver rails with gloved hands. "March," was the word, and the body moved.

Out upon the portico were borne the remains, Captain Johnson immediately at the head. Down the steps with measured tread, across the open space to the black and waiting car. Commander Johnson stepped aside, the mountings glistened as the burial case and its honored burden was carried up and placed upon the diaz of

as follows: Rev. Dr. Newman, Bishop Haines, Bishop Porter, Rev. Dr. Chambers, Rev. Dr. Field, Rev. Dr. Bridgeman, Rev. Dr. West, Rev. Father Deahon, Rev. Robert Collyer, Rabbi Browne and Doctors Douglas, Shady and Sands.

Colonel Beck, in charge of the regulars, commanded his companies as indicated above, to positions, company "A" on the right and company "E" on the left of the hearse. Colored men were at the bridles of the twenty-four horses. Sixteen men of Meade post, Philadelphia, of which General Grant was a member, were almost directly in front of the team of black leaders, and the David's Island band preceded.

THE PROCESSION STARTS.

A signal was given and the line of coaches with the clergymen moved off the plaza on to Broadway. The band stood waiting at the head of the funeral cortege. Colonel Beck advanced to the head of the line of black horses before the coaches. "Move on," were his words of command with uplifted sword. The leaders stepped forward, led by colored men, and in an instant the black line of horses had straightened their traces and the wheels beneath the remains were moving.

THE HOUR WAS 9:47

The band played a dirge and the tramp of regulars and honor guard beat upon the pavement. Thousands beneath trees and crowding the sides of the square looked silently on the black

The speculating fever even got hold of the news boys, several of whom stuck and of vigorous physique, were putting on broad silken sashes of white and black. They were the notices in their chairs to the effect that seats from which to view the parade could be procured at 9 o'clock. Broadway presented an animated spectacle as far as the eye could reach. The sidewalks were thronged with people. Every train and every steamer poured its load into the great artery of travel. Bronzed faces from the country, white faces from city counting rooms and offices and dirty faces from tenement districts were in the crowd. Rich and poor, rogues and rascals jostled each other.

GOOD NATURED.

On the curb stones and sidewalks everybody seemed to be good natured and took the jostling and jamming as a matter of course. The police tried to keep people off the street, but it was hard work. There were more who wanted to pass along the walks than there was width of passage to contain them. Madison Square was thronged and troops of sight seers were trailing up Twenty-third street.

As early as half past seven o'clock an officer on horseback dashed up to the ladies' entrance of the Fifth Avenue hotel and dismounting took his stand at the door. The pearl gray sash, denoting was across his breast. The officer was Colonel Hedges, of General Hancock's staff. He was followed shortly by a wild looking gentleman in military uniform, who proved to be the marshal of the presidential and gubernatorial carriage party, Lieut. Colonel Gillespie.

Their presence attracted an enormous crowd to the draped entrance to the hotel, on Twenty-third street, and the police were soon called upon to clear the sidewalk. The crowd then surged toward the main portal of the hotel, which shortly became impassable. Inside an increasing throng of gold-laced and uniformed men blocked every hall and corridor. In the main hall tall, erect, and smoking a big cigar, was the centre of an admiring throng. He stood in a group of naval officers, chatting pleasantly with old friends. The party were all in full uniform and attracted universal attention, that flagged only for a moment when a file of attendants of the Japanese minister entered.

The big marble hall was completely choked with humanity long before 8 o'clock. In the big parlors up stairs all was stir and bustle. While the president and cabinet ministers were at breakfast in one end of the building and quietly preparing for the pageant at the other end, committees, organizations and delegations were gathering and getting ready, here, there and everywhere.

Badges, sashes and military orders found way for members in these places of inextricable confusion of swarming humanity. In a quiet little parlor off the ladies' parlor, facing the square, a group of serious men, most of them gray haired and old, but nearly all erect military toggery, stood in friendly conversation with a tall man, in whose white moustache and chin beard and soldierly bearing one recognized at a glance the gallant confederate, General Buckner, from whom Grant wrested his first hard won laurels at Fort Donelson. General Buckner was in ordinary black citizens' dress.

A smaller man, similarly attired at the other end of the room, whose gray hairs formed a striking contrast to the leonine mane and fierce black moustache of General Logan, with whom he was talking, was the famous general, the bravest of the brave, who succumbed to General Grant's sword.

JOE JOHNSTON,

Hamilton Fish was not among the pall bearers. He was sick and the president had appointed A. J. Drexel, of Philadelphia in his stead. At the last moment it was said that Admiral Worden had been appointed a pall bearer in place of Admiral Rowan.

At half-past eight o'clock Colonel Hedges summoned the pall bearers to their carriages.

THE PRESIDENT'S CARRIAGE,

drawn by six horses, was called up to the door next, but it had fully an hour to wait. The president had signified his intention of riding with Secretary Bayard. He was at that time, having finished his breakfast, quietly conversing in his parlors

In anticipation of his coming out, an enormous crowd, which the police found it difficult to control, gathered opposite the hotel entrance on Twenty-third street and yells of "here they come," went up every time a delegation of Grand Army veterans, a gubernatorial delegation or a committee of state delegates, who were burrowed in the big hotel apparently in countless numbers, came out.

MRS. GRANT ABSENT.

The Grant family were quietly gathered in their parlors overlooking the square and strangers were rigidly excluded from the hall leading to their rooms. Mrs. Grant had not arrived and it was announced she would not attend the funeral, but had concluded to remain at Mt. McGregor. She was reported by Dr. Newman to be still weak and ill, though not confined to her bed.

The party gathered at the hotel ready to take carriages for their position in the parade, when the column should have advanced so far as to permit their carriage to fall in line from the hotel. They were Col. and Mrs. Fred D. Grant, Mrs. Sartoris, Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Grant, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Grant, Mrs. Cramer, Mrs. Dent, Miss Cramer, General Creswell, Mr. Stephen L. Moriarity, Senor Romero and Mr. U. J. Arkell.

The members of the party, who from time to time appeared at the windows as the head of the column began to move up past the hotel, bands playing as they passed, were objects of general attention on the part of the crowds gathered on

THE MOUNTED CATAFALQUE.

The veterans retired down the steps. The honor guard, next to the hearse on either side, took the same relative positions they had maintained to the remains while being borne to the car. The steps were drawn away from the hearse and commander Johnson took his place in the center and immediately behind the funeral car. At his left and right, in either rear corner of the car, were Commodore Dowling and Ormsby, of the Wheeler post, Saratoga, respectively.

Next, and immediately behind these, were representatives of the Loyal Legion, abreast as follows: Gen. C. A. Carlton, Paymaster George D. Barton, L. T.; Col. Floyd Clarkson, L. T.; Col. A. M. Clark and Capt. E. Blunt.

THE CLERGY AND PHYSICIANS

had paid respect to the remains by alighting from their carriages and accompanying them from the steps to the car.

They then entered the carriages on either side of the plaza, near Broadway, funeral car rolling over the curbs into Broadway.

The black corridors of city hall were silent. General Grant's last journey was begun. Then, at 9:52, Mayor Grace Comptroller Loew and Aldermen Sanger and Jachue emerged from the city building and entered the carriage that had drawn up in front. They followed out the plaza as fast as disposed of in carriages and when it was 10 o'clock the police lines were withdrawn and the people streamed across the plaza without hindrance.

THE LAST SCENE

there was ended. All night long, carpenters with saw and hammer were busy on Broadway, building platforms with seats, which rented at prices ranging all the way from $1 to $10 a head. The decorators, too, had not been idle. On the fronts of the many great warehouses were displayed emblems of mourning which were not there the night before. The reviewing stands were located in all sorts of places. Nearly every empty stand along the route had

PIONEER WORK.
Joseph Lomox, the First President of the Grand Rapids Road, Recounts Its Early History—Gossip About Citizens of Fort Wayne.

Mr. Joseph Lomox, the first president of the Grand Rapids road, lives at Grand Rapids, and although he is seventy-five years old, he is active. He related his experience in building the Grand Rapids road to a Democrat reporter recently. Louisville parties first conceived the scheme of building a road north through Fort Wayne to the lumber regions. About 1860 English capitalists took the project to build a road from Fort Wayne to Grand Rapids and in 1861 they sent over their engineer, James Samuel. "Now," says Mr. Lomox, "the road had already been surveyed, but in order to satisfy Mr. Samuel, a party was formed, composed of our engineers, Mr. Samuel and myself, about fourteen in all, to go over the land and explain all our plans, surveys, etc., to the British agent. Well, we journeyed in carriages from Fort Wayne to Big Rapids—a distance of nearly 200 miles. From that point we walked through the primeval forests a distance of some eighty two miles to a point where Kalkaska now stands. From that locality we turned west and, after a walk of fifteen miles, reached Grand Traverse Bay. Up to this time we had not seen a single human being, except members of our party, since we left Big Rapids. At Elk Rapids we took a steamer for Chicago and then Mr. Samuel, one engineer and myself went to New York city, where the English agent completed and printed his report to the British capitalists. In this report, which was in the form of a pamphlet, he spoke in glowing terms of the project and very strongly urged the building of the road.

In 1856 the general government made a grant to the state of Michigan of between 600,000 and 700,000 acres land. In the following year we received the grant from the state legislature. All of this land lay north of Grand Rapids. Being greatly encouraged by our success we began at once to build the roadbed, beginning at Fort Wayne, paying for the same by means of individual subscriptions collected along the line of the road. In 1859, when we had some fifty miles of road bed built, our contractor failed and we were compelled to cease operations. In some manner we managed to hang together until I went to Washington and succeeded in obtaining another land grant of 1,200,000 acres of land, which we finally received through the proper channel—the state legislature. In addition to this we were successful in securing the passage of a law, which permitted municipalities along the proposed line to vote aid for building the road. Grand Rapids voted $188,000 and other sums voted elsewhere amounted, all told, to about $600,000. At this time, 1860, a change was made in the presidency of the road, Mr. Samuel Hanna, the vice-president of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad, being appointed to that office in my stead. The object of this change was to secure the services of that company in building this road. Iron now had become very expensive. Mr. Hanna died in a few months and the scheme fell flat again. Joseph K. Edgerton, of Fort Wayne, was appointed to take Mr. Hanna's place. The new president made a contract with the Continental Improvement company, of Pennsylvania, to build the road. They did so. The amount which they gave in stocks, lands and bonds was nearly $21,000,000. The actual cost of building the road was over $4,000,000. This company obtained control of the road in 1869. In the following year they began to build, and in 1873 the road was accepted by the government of this state. The next year, 1884, saw the road completed from Fort Wayne to Potosky, a distance of about 320 miles. Four years previously only twenty miles had been built, from Grand Rapids north, that being required by the government to hold the land grant.

This is pre-eminently the vacation month, when thousands seek rest and recreation. Take it before you go, and you will enjoy your vacation a thousand fold.

CANCER OF TONGUE!
A Case Resembling that of Gen. Grant.

Some ten years ago I had a scrofulous sore on my right hand which gave me great trouble and under the old time treatment was healed up, and I supposed I was well. I found, however, that only been driven into the system by the use of potash and mercury, and in March, 1882, it broke out in my throat concentrated in what some of the doctors denominated cancer. I was placed under treatment for this disease. Some six or seven of the best physicians of the country had me at different times under their charge, among them three specialists in this line; but one after another would exhaust their skill and drop me, for I grew worse continually. The cancer had eaten through my neck, destroying the root of my tongue and lower lip, then attacked my tongue, palate and lower lip, destroying the palate and under lip entirely and leaving me unable to eat or drink. I was reduced to a mere frame of skin and bones, almost unable to turn myself in bed. I could not eat any solid food, but subsisted on liquids and my tongue was so far gone I could not talk. The anguish of mind and the horrible sufferings of body which I experienced never can be repeated. Given up by physicians to die, with no hope of recovery upon the part of friends who sat and wept, I decided to try every moment to be my last; in fact, my husband would place his hand on me every now and then to see whether I was alive or not, and at one time all decided that life was extinct, and my death was reported all over the country.

Such was my wretched and hopeless condition the first of last October, 1882, when my friends commenced giving me Swift's Specific. In less than a month, the eating place stopped swelling and healing commenced, and the cancer in my neck had been closed and firmly knitted together. A progress of a new under lip in regrowing, and the cancer which was almost destroyed is being recovered, and it seems that nature is supplying a new tongue. I can talk so well that my friends can readily understand me, and can eat solid food again. I am able to walk about wherever I please without the assistance of anyone, and have gained fifty pounds of flesh. All this under the blessing of a merciful Heavenly Father, is due to Swift's Specific. I am a wonder and a marvel to all my friends, hundreds of whom have known my intense sufferings, and have visited me in my afflictions. While I am not entirely well, yet my gratitude is none the less devout, and I am confident that a perfect recovery is now in sight. If any doubt these facts, I would refer them to Hon. John H. The Golden Eagles Vanquished.
The game between the Golden Eagles, of Fort Wayne, and the Green Stockings at Athletic park, yesterday afternoon, says the South Bend Times, was quite well attended. The Golden Eagles are a good club in the field, but their battery is weak. The Green Stockings' battery did some splendid work yesterday, but only in exceptional cases was the fielding up to the usual standard. The manager of the Fort Wayne club is a colored man and a first-class ball player. The following is the score by innings:

Why do Doctors Prescribe Liquors?
Because they know not what else to do, or because sometimes a little liquor serves to kindle the exhausted fires of digestion. But this liquor prescription is bad business for the patients, for it makes drunkards out of a large majority of them. Brown's Iron Bitters does not kindle a temporary fire. It nourishes, enriches, strengthens, purifies. It drives out debility and dyspepsia, and sets the invigorated system at work on a basis of health.

THE LUTHERANS.
Discussion of "Angels" and "Instruction in the German Language" at Their Conference.

At the morning session of the Evangelical Lutheran synod, at Indianapolis, yesterday, Rev. Dr. Gross, of Fort Wayne, continued his treatise on "Angels," giving the second thesis, describing them as many, mighty, wise, holy and eternally beautiful, and the discussion of this was generally participated in. In the afternoon the regular routine business was considered and last night there was a teachers' conference, over which Professor Siegrist, of Laport, presided, and Charles Seibold, of Fort Wayne, acted as secretary. Addresses were delivered on "Instruction in the German language in the Public Schools," by Mr. Meyer, of Farmers Retreat, Ind., and on "Lessons in Geography," by F. Lentner, of Cleveland. This conference will meet again on Monday evening and the synod held a session this morning, adjourning at noon out of respect to the memory of General Grant.

After Their Vacation.
This is pre-eminently the vacation month, when thousands seek rest and recreation. But to those who suffer the depressing effects of summer debility, the disagreeable symptoms of scrofula, the tortures of biliousness, dyspepsia or sick headache, there is more pain than pleasure in leaving home. To such we give, Hunt's Sarsaparilla a trial. It will purify your blood, tone up and strengthen your body, expel every trace of scrofula, correct biliousness, and positively cure dyspepsia or sick headache. Take it before you go, and you will enjoy your vacation a thousand fold.

CANCER OF TONGUE!
A Case Resembling that of Gen. Grant.

Some ten years ago I had a scrofulous sore on my right hand which gave me great trouble and under the old time treatment was healed up, and I supposed I was well. I found, however, that only been driven into the system by the use of potash and mercury, and in March, 1882, it broke out in my throat concentrated in what some of the doctors denominated cancer. I was placed under treatment for this disease. Some six or seven of the best physicians of the country had me at different times under their charge, among them three specialists in this line; but one after another would exhaust their skill and drop me, for I grew worse continually. The cancer had eaten through my neck, destroying the root of my tongue and lower lip, then attacked my tongue, palate and lower lip, destroying the palate and under lip entirely and leaving me unable to eat or drink. I was reduced to a mere frame of skin and bones, almost unable to turn myself in bed. I could not eat any solid food, but subsisted on liquids and my tongue was so far gone I could not talk. The anguish of mind and the horrible sufferings of body which I experienced never can be repeated. Given up by physicians to die, with no hope of recovery upon the part of friends who sat and wept, I decided to try every moment to be my last; in fact, my husband would place his hand on me every now and then to see whether I was alive or not, and at one time all decided that life was extinct, and my death was reported all over the country.

Such was my wretched and hopeless condition the first of last October, 1882, when my friends commenced giving me Swift's Specific. In less than a month, the eating place stopped swelling and healing commenced, and the cancer in my neck had been closed and firmly knitted together. A progress of a new under lip in regrowing, and the cancer which was almost destroyed is being recovered, and it seems that nature is supplying a new tongue. I can talk so well that my friends can readily understand me, and can eat solid food again. I am able to walk about wherever I please without the assistance of anyone, and have gained fifty pounds of flesh. All this under the blessing of a merciful Heavenly Father, is due to Swift's Specific. I am a wonder and a marvel to all my friends, hundreds of whom have known my intense sufferings, and have visited me in my afflictions. While I am not entirely well, yet my gratitude is none the less devout, and I am confident that a perfect recovery is now in sight. If any doubt these facts, I would refer them to Hon. John H. That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System
Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.
"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." L. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Fort Wayne Paint and Color Works,
No. 12 West Columbia Street Fort Wayne, Indiana.

To Painters
And others wanting First-class Paints: Do you know that you have in Fort Wayne a Manufacturer of Mixed Paint and Grinders of Colors, who can save you your Paints from first hand instead of paying the middle man his profits, which are from 25 to 33 per cent. O. L. STARKLEY, the Painter and proprietor of the Fort Wayne Paint and Color Works, came to Fort Wayne in April, 1856, and is identified as one of the old citizens who has helped build up Fort Wayne, and his knowledge of Paints and the composition of pigments to form different shades and tints is well-known to the public, and his long practical experience in painting gives him the knowledge of Paints that a mere dealer cannot have for he does not know anything about Paints, as he buys them sealed up and he cannot tell you what it takes to make this or that shade. All he knows is what the label on the can says. Neither can he tell you shades that will or will not fade. By buying your Paints of O. L. STARKLEY you can get all the information you want. I am making Liquid Paints in all shades and colors; also the same shades and colors in paste form, the same thickness as white lead and requires thinning down the same as white lead. In making the different shades my formulas are all registered giving the amount of each color it takes to form certain shades all thoroughly mixed together in the powder mills, then wet down and run through a mixing machine, and from there to the mills where it is all ground together, making a pigment that cannot be made by hand. Call or send and get some of my sample cards of colors and tints; also see elevations of gothic houses colored up with four and five shades, which will give you a good idea how to paint and ornament the outside of your houses.

I say again, do not buy of the middle man if you want to save money. I will guarantee my prices and quality of goods with any manufacturer in the United States.

At 9:20 o'clock
PRESIDENT CLEVELAND
called his cabinet together and arrangements were made for the order in which they were to leave the hotel to take their places in the procession. The clock in front of the hotel pointed to five minutes after 10 o'clock when General Hancock and General Shaler rode under its windows at the head of the procession.
The gun reflected the mace of glittering gold on the uniforms of the staff as it trooped on, followed by the regulars who in passing reversed arms, while the bands played mournful dirges. Along the line of the avenue where the troops of the first division of the national guards were drawn up, guns were shouldered as the general passed.
On Western avenue continuous

organizations extended down as far as the eye could reach. Between these were files of citizen soldiers on one side in uniforms, ready to do battle for the country. On the other, battle scarred and worn, its work done and proudly looking backward over the heroic past, passed the long procession with veiled flags.

Not a foot of spare ground was anywhere in sight, and how the police made way for the carriages, the military, and the marching thousands in citizens' dress seemed incomprehensible, but they did.

Inspector Williams swung his club at the point at Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street, where the pressure of the throng was greatest, and his presence alone acted like a charm. In the crowd utmost good nature prevailed. All made room for everybody else to the extent of their ability, and no harsh words were heard.

SHOWY WHITE HELMETS and cream colored jackets of the twenty-second regiment of state troops made a continuous double file fronting the hotel to the north of it. The first and second batteries, handsomely mounted, held the avenue as far as Twenty-eighth street. Throughout the line the crowd was so dense that its power to exercise its presence had passed where it stood, and remained an inert mass from sheer inability to move a foot. Even and finding their occupation gone, stood still with the rest, part and parcel of the immovable throng.

At 10:10 precisely the Grant family came out of the ladies entrance in Fifth avenue hotel and took their carriages. Col. Fred Grant and wife rode with General Grant's favorite daughter, Nellie (Mrs. Sartoris). U. S. Grant, jr., and wife occupied the next carriage together with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Grant, and the Cramer family the third carriage. As the carriages received their occupants they rolled away toward the avenue and remained there closely wedged in and waiting their turn in the line.

They had been waiting more than a quarter of an hour before President Cleveland came out and took a seat in his carriage with Secretary Bayard.

IN THE LINE
Ahead of them had gone a number of carriages, following the Grant family in the following order: Mrs. Rowline Holman, daughter of General Grant's friend and first secretary of war, Generals Old and staff in four carriages, detachments of the Wheeler and U. S. Grant Posts G. A. R., in four carriages, Mr. J. W. Drexel and members of the Aztec club, survivors of the Mexican war.

Next came
the vice president and cabinet in five carriages, the members of the supreme court, United States senators and house of congressional committee in a score of carriages, the committee of state legislators in thirty carriages, ex-President Arthur and members of their cabinets, then the foreign ministers and diplomatic and consular officers under General Grant's administration. These filled ten carriages. Then came representatives of the different departments of the national government and next the governors of states with staffs, then representatives of various cities and so on through an almost endless cortege.

THE CATAFALQUE.
The catafalque passed Twenty-third street at 1 o'clock sharp. The hum of expectation that had preceded it was hushed as it passed by and all heads were uncovered.

An old negro woman who somehow had been pushed forward to the curb stood there wedged in. She essayed vainly to kneel, with tears streaming down her wrinkled face. She was held fast by the crowd and could not stir.

On a single telegraph pole at Broadway and Twenty-third streets were perched not less than twenty-eight spectators. As soon as the catafalque passed, carriages containing Col. Fred Grant, wife and sister fell in line without confusion.

TIERED OF WAITING.
Both Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Hendricks had tired of the long wait, after sitting in their carriage stared at by the curious crowd till 11:30 o'clock, and they retired to their rooms in the hotel. They observed the parade from the windows and did not again come out until the catafalque had passed the hotel. Their carriages had remained at the door. Secretaries Endicott and Manning, whose carriages followed the vice president's, remained in their seats. The other cabinet ministers, who rode in pairs, did the same.

THE LINE PERFECT.
Almost the last carriage had wheeled into line at Twenty-third street, when there fell in behind one containing an officer with a broad gold band across his breast. Two crutches stood up in the carriage beside him and proclaimed his name as the gold scarf had announced his rank. He was

GENERAL DANIEL SICKLES.
Following behind the crippled veteran's carriage there trod seemingly an endless army with banners, without show or glitter, but with armless sleeves, limping gait, and the scarred faces that stirred men's minds as they passed with deep and strong emotion. These were the dead heroes comrades, who shared his dangers on battlefields, who marched behind his victorious banners over many a road and now walked with him to his last resting place, that so many of them are soon to follow to.

AT THE TOMB.
The procession seemed unending, stretching southward as far as the eye could see. The streets all the way to the tomb were packed with people and as the right of the column approached the tomb, the dull reverberations of guns from men-of-war could be heard, and the troops broke column from the left, marching to the right or east side of the road. After forming a line arms were presented and the catafalque slowly passed.

New York, August 8—3:53 p. m.—Catafalque just entering Riverside drive. Distance to the tomb two and one-half miles. The catafalque is an hour and a half behind the head of the procession.

LAIN IN THE TOMB.
New York, August 8, 5:08 p. m.—In the presence of thousands of uncovered heads and amid the most profound silence, the dead hero's remains were lifted from the catafalque and placed in the temporary tomb.

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 8.—Joseph S. Miller, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has made a preliminary report on the general condition of the internal revenue service. The report says the total collections for the fiscal year, amounting to $112,420,111, have been properly accounted for and the money covered into the Treasury of the United States. The cost of collecting the internal revenue for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1885, was about $4,480,000, being 39 per cent. of the amount collected and $600,000 less than the cost for the year of 1884.

Exchanging Shots.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., August 8.—A fatal shooting affray occurred here on Thursday, the parties being Rev. Daniel Poe, (colored) and Albert Baily, a colored laborer. Baily left town some weeks ago, and obtained employment elsewhere. He left his wife here, and later sent her money to go to him. Failing to hear from her, he returned and found her living with the Rev. Mr. Poe, ostensibly as his housekeeper. This incensed Baily, and he went to Poe's residence, called for the minister and his wife. Poe ordered him away. Baily retorted, charging Poe with estranging his wife's affections, and adding that he would not leave without her. Poe then fired at Baily, striking him in the arm. Several shots were exchanged, when Baily fell, apparently fatally wounded. Poe was found inside the house, with a ball in his breast. Both will probably die.

Foul Play.

NEVADA, Mo., August 8.—Two dead bodies, with their throats cut from ear to ear, were found on a by-road six miles from here yesterday. Out Door Sports.

With the opening of the season of out door sports comes the time of trouble for the poor victims of Hay Fever and Rose Cold. For them flowers have no odor and the summer little or no beauty. To sniff, sneeze and wipe their weeping eyes for three or four successive months—this is their pitiable portion. There is no help in sea voyages, there is no help in high mountain air. But there is a positive cure in Ely's Cream Balm. Try it. If you continue to suffer it is because you neglect a remedy as sure as it is cheap and pleasant.

The rush has not yet set in on the Wash road. Shipments of grain on the main line are comparatively light, and a dozen Mogul engines are lying idle in the Andrews round house. The boom is expected to set in next week.

Under a recent law passed in Ohio, all employees on this district of the Wash road, hired since the 19th of February, are compelled to pass an examination as to color blindness. The rule only extends to employees who run into Ohio.

The Decatur Democrat has this gossip: "C. L. and Louie Centlivier, of Fort Wayne, were in this city Tuesday last. They came here for the purpose of buying fine horses, and succeeded in their efforts. The Centlivier beer will sell for the same price all the same."

THE LIGHT QUESTION.

Huntington Officials View Our Spark With High Favor.

The mayor and council of Huntington, visited Logansport yesterday to examine the system of lighting that city. The Herald says: "The city is lighted by the Jenny electric light, and it has been in use for the past year. The people have had a trial of it, and from what conversation we had they are well pleased at the results achieved. The visitors were taken over the town at night in order the better to see the lights, and the result was even beyond expectation. The night was very dark, and during the entire drive, the rain fell hard, yet the streets were everywhere sufficiently light that one could readily see for more than a square distant. The city has in all fifty-six electric lamps. When gas was used there were 222 posts, and the area of these gas posts is lighted by forty-six electric lamps. The lights in the business part of the city are hung across the street corners, and each lamp is from two to three squares apart. On the outskirts a few towers are used as well as the street hangers. There is not a corner of the city but is nicely lighted, the light being of a brilliant, even kind. It might be remarked that the squares of the city are 400 feet each, so it can be seen the territory over which the light throws its rays."

Personal Mention.

"The wife of Conductor Al. Baldwin, of Toledo, accompanied by her sons, Frank and Fred, and her sister Mrs. Shaffer, of Ft. Wayne, are welcome guests of numerous friends, in Andrews, this week. A son of Engineer William Crocker met with an accident in Fort Wayne, last week. The little fellow, with an older brother was playing in a wagon, when both fell out, the older one falling on top and breaking an arm of the younger.—Engineer Teegarden, of the Nickle Plate, Engineer McPhail, of the Fort Wayne & Muncie, and Engineer Hambley, of the C. & W. M. railroads, were in attendance at the meeting of the Engineer's Brotherhood, Tuesday evening, and the guests of the members of that order.—Charles Barthold, connected with the Electric Light company at Fort Wayne, was here on a four day's visit last week, with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Moore. The young man left highly pleased with the people and the place, notwithstanding the derogatory stories he had read in the Fort Wayne Gazette.—Andrews Express.

Watching the Crops.

During the months of May, June, July, August, September and October a report is sent every Wednesday, at 2 p. m., by telegraph, to each Wash division superintendent's office, from every station, in addition to the daily car report, showing the probable increase or decrease of the crops of corn, wheat and oats, and also the prospective stock shipments as compared with last year. These reports are forwarded by the respective superintendents to the general Wash officers at St. Louis.

HERO WORSHIP.

People of Fort Wayne Do Honor to Gen. U. S. Grant—The Solenn Memorial Exercises and Incidents.

At 6 o'clock a fog hung over the city, but soon the sun banished it and the day brightened up with splendor. Early in the morning flags were unfurled at half mast and the draped stars and stripes seemed to recall the victories won under their folds by the nation's dead hero, Gen. U. S. Grant.

The Jeffersonian club's handsome flag hung gracefully from the post office. Crapes encircled the city hall, hung in graceful folds from the engine house and also the prison. The walls of the new government building were similarly covered, and the old court house looked gloomy in black. Business houses hung pictures of the dead general. Private residences gave evidences of the nation's loss and the city and its people seemed attired in mourning dress. The SENTINEL bulletin from New York announced that General Grant's funeral had started.

The fire bell in weird, piercing sounds spread the news, then the court house bell took up the tidings and likewise rang the funeral knell. Crowds of men, wearing badges of sorrow, stood about recounting the noble life and heroic deeds of the lamented general. On Berry street an old veteran lifted his hat and, turning his eyes to heaven, muttered a silent prayer for his old commander. To THE SENTINEL reporter he said: "I fought under Grant in the wilderness," and tears coursed down his furrowed cheeks as he spoke.

At noon all shops and manufactories closed and at 1 o'clock almost all public and private business was suspended. The Grand Army boys in blue and old veterans with martial tread gathered at the Lion S. Bass and Anthony Wayne armories. Soon they were on Main and Berry streets, reinforced by the handsome Knights of Pythias and staid Odd Fellows. Headed by the City band the organization made a short parade and finally disbanded near the government building, that every man might decide for himself between the Academy and the Temple.

At 2 o'clock both houses were comfortably filled and the published programs pursued. Hon. Allen Zollars presided at the Temple, while this program was carried out:

1. Dirge..... Rev. J. K. Walters.
2. Prayer..... Rev. George P. Shide.
3. Reading resolutions..... Hon. J. K. Edgerton.

THE SENTINEL cannot now treat the addresses, but is warranted in pronouncing them worthy the grand occasion. The resolutions by the Hon. J. K. Edgerton partook of the nature of a memorial address and retold the greatness of the hero of hero's, Gen. U. S. Grant.

On the whole the day will be memorable in the history of Fort Wayne, whose people did themselves honor and glory by attesting their love and esteem for Gen. U. S. Grant.

Gen. Grant Laid Away With Magnificent Ceremony.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—At 12 o'clock this morning Undertaker Merritt brushed the glass panels above General Grant's body and drew from their places the two lids which cover the casket. The four screws in each were turned down and the face of the dead had been CLOSED FOREVER FROM VIEW, unless there shall in the future come from the family a request to remove the lids. Then the dead was left in the care of officers, who stood erect and silent within the closed gates and beneath the black drapery. A huge floral piece, "the gates ajar," had a place in the head of the casket, and the sweet smell of lilies was borne down to those who stood and watched. Great bowls of red and yellow rose buds added their fragrance.

ONE THING WITHOUT FRANKNESS. But there was one tribute that lives in the memory of the dead. This was a plain wreath of oak leaves, pinned together with stems of oak leaves and formed in water," and "The chorus of the pilgrims," from Tautouner.

The honor guard of regulars filed into the open space at 9 o'clock. First company A, fifth artillery, under Col. W. B. Beck, and company E, twelfth infantry, under Major Brown, then came then came the original guard of honor that was on duty at Mt. McGregor, and which alone should lift the remains to-day. Filing into the corridors of City hall, they took places beside the remains, under command of John H. Johnson, senior vice-commander of Grant post of G. A. R., of Brooklyn, New York.

THE FUNERAL PAR.

"LIFT THE REMAINS."

was the best command in clear but low tones. The twelve men stooped to the silver rule with gloved hands. "March," was the word, and the body moved.

Out upon the portico were borne the remains. Captain Johnson immediately at the head. Down the steps with measured tread, across the open space to the black and waiting car. Commander Johnson stepped aside, the mounting glistered as the burial case and its honored burden was carried up and placed upon the dais of

as follows: Rev. Dr. Newman, Bishop Haines, Bishop Porter, Rev. Dr. Chalmers, Rev. Dr. Field, Rev. Dr. Bridgman, Rev. Dr. West, Rev. Father Walsh, Rev. Robert Gilley, Rabbi Browne and Doctors Douglas, Shady and Smith.

Colonel Beck, in charge of the regulars, commanded his companies as indicated above, to positions, company "A" on the right and company "E" on the left of the hearse. Colored men were at the head of the twenty-four horses. Ninety-two of Meade post, Philadelphia, of which General Grant was a member, were almost directly in front of the team of black leaders, and the Devil's Island band preceded.

THE PROCESSION STARTS.

A signal was given and the line of coaches with the clergymen moved off the plaza on to Broadway. The band stood waiting at the head of the funeral cortege. Colonel Beck advanced to the head of the line of black horses before the coaches. "Move on," were his words of command with uplifted sword. The leaders stepped forward, led by colored men, and in an instant the black line of horses had straightened their traces and the wheels beneath the remains were moving.

THE HORSE WAS 9:47

The band played a dirge and the tramp of regular and honor guard beat upon the pavement. Thousands beneath trees and crowding the sides of the square looked silently on the black to their chairs to the effect that seats from which to view the parade could be procured at 9 o'clock. Broadway presented an animated spectacle as far as the eye could reach. The sidewalks were thronged with people. Every train and every steamer poured its load into the great artery of travel. Brown faces from the country, white faces from city counting rooms and offices and dirty faces from tenement districts were in the crowd. Rich and poor, rogues and rascals jostled each other.

GOOD NATURED.

On the curb stones and sidewalks everybody seemed to be good natured and took the pushing and jostling as a matter of course. The police tried to keep people off the street, but it was hard work. There were more who wanted to push along the walks than there was width of pavement to contain them. Madison Square was thronged and troops of night men were trailing up Twenty third street.

As early as half past seven o'clock an officer on horseback dashed up to the hotel entrance of the Fifth Avenue hotel and dismounting took his stand at the door. The party gray ash, denoting an aide of General Hancock, was across his breast. The officer was Colonel Halpin, of General Hancock's staff. He was followed shortly by a wild looking gentleman in military uniform, who proved to be the marshal of the presidential and gubernatorial carriage party, Lieut. Colonel Gillespie.

Their presence attracted an enormous crowd to the draped entrance to the hotel, on Twenty-third street, and the police were soon called upon to clear the sidewalk. The crowd then surged toward the main portal of the hotel, which shortly became impassable. Inside an increasing throng of gold-laced and uniformed men blocked every hall and corridor. In the main hall tail, erect, and smoking a big cigar, was the centre of an admiring throng. He stood in a group of naval officers, chatting pleasantly with old friends. The party were all in full uniform and attracted universal attention, that flagged only for a moment when a file of attendants of the Japanese minister entered.

The big marble hall was completely choked with humanity long before 8 o'clock. In the big parlors up stairs all was stir and bustle. While the president and cabinet ministers were at breakfast in one end of the building and quietly preparing for the payment of the other end, committees, organizations and delegations were gathering and getting ready, here, there and everywhere.

Badges, medals and military orders (and way for members in these places of inevitable confusion of evening humanity. It is a quiet little party off the main hall, facing the square, a group of persons near, most of them gray haired and old, but nearly all erect and vigorous physique, were putting on broad athenian masks of white and black. They were the

the bravest of the brave, who succumbed to General Grant's sword.

Hamilton Park was not among the pall bearers. He was sick and the president had appointed A. J. Drexel, of Philadelphia in his stead. At the last moment it was said that Admiral Worden had been appointed a pall bearer in place of Admiral Howland.

At half past eight o'clock Colonel Halpin summoned the pall bearers to their carriages.

THE PRESIDENT'S CARRIAGE, drawn by six horses, was called up to the door next, but it had fully an hour to wait. The president had signified his intention of riding with Secretary Fiske. He was at that time, having finished his breakfast, quietly conversing in his parlors.

In anticipation of his coming out, an enormous crowd, which the police found it difficult to control, gathered opposite the hotel entrance on Twenty-third street and yells of "here they come," went up every time a delegation of Grand Army veterans, a gubernatorial delegation or a committee of state delegates, who were burrowed in the big hall apparently in question numbers, came out.

MR. GRANT'S AGENT.

The Grant family were quietly gathered in their parlors overlooking the square and strangers were rigidly excluded from the hall leading to their rooms. Mrs. Grant had not arrived and it was announced she would not attend the funeral, but had concluded to remain at Mt. McGregor. She was reported by Dr. Newman to be still weak and ill, though not confined to her bed.

The party gathered at the hotel ready to take carriages for their position in the parade, when the columns should have advanced so far as to permit their carriage to fall in line from the hotel. They were Col. and Mrs. Fred D. Grant, Mrs. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Grant, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Grant, Mrs. Cranmer, Mrs. Hunt, Miss Cranmer, General Ormswell, Mr. Stephen L. Mumary, Senator Sumner and Mr. U. J. Arkell.

The members of the party, who from time to time appeared at the windows as the head of the column began to move up past the hotel, were playing as they passed, were objects of general attention on the part of the crowds gathered on Riverside Park, on the Hudson, Where Grant was Buried.

THE MOUNTED CATALOGUE.

The veterans retired down the steps. The honor guard, sent to the hearse on either side, took the same relative positions they had maintained to the remains while being borne to the car. The steps were drawn away from the hearse and commander Johnson took his place in the center and immediately behind the funeral car. At his left and right, in either rear corner of the car, were Commodore Downing and Ormsby, of the Wheeler post, Harbors, respectively.

Next, and immediately behind these, were representatives of the Loyal Legion, dressed as follows: Gen. C. A. Carlton, Paymaster George D. Barton, I. T. Col. Floyd Clarkson, I. T.; Col. A. M. Clark and Capt. E. Blunt.

THE CLERGY AND MUSICIANS

had paid respect to the remains by alighting from their carriages and accompanying them from the steps to the car.

They then entered the carriage on either side of the plaza, near Broadway, funeral car rolling over the curbs into Broadway.

The black corridors of city hall were silent. General Grant's last journey was begun. Then, at 9:52, Mayor Grace, Comptroller Low and Aldermen Sangre and Jacobs emerged from the city building and entered the carriage that had drawn up in front. They followed out the plaza as fast as disposed of in carriages and when it was 10 o'clock the police lines were withdrawn and the people streamed across the plaza without hindrance.

THE LAST MERE

CHOLERA is rapidly moving westward and will soon appear in this country. In order to prevent disastrous effects from its ravages every preventive should be employed, and the system should be in perfect condition. At this season of the year the system is in a weak state and easily susceptible to dangerous disease. Pain in the back, weariness, lassitude, headache, dyspepsia, indigestion, kidney and liver complaints are but the result of neglect. During the last visitation of cholera to this country no medicine was found equal to Misha's Balm Bitters, both as a preventive and cure, and it has been equally successful in all the diseases above mentioned. It renews and invigorates the blood, restoring to health and strength, and thus shielding the system from disease.
